Taratunin, A. Z. Truhalev, S. M. Zhuravlev, A. F. Bulgaria: Chervenkov, Vulko Rumania: N.U.	Allegedly held simultaneously with celebrations for Stalin's birthday. Chervenkov submitted a written proposal for an independent Macedonia, with Salonika or Bitolj as the capital. To satisfy Greek Communists (who were not present), the Aliakmon River was designated the border between Greece and Macedonia; Kutsovlachs would be autonomous and have their own bishop. Source states that the above proposal was accepted. Rumanian representative reportedly suggested that Rumania and Bulgaria cooperate in establishing the proposed independent Macedonia; his proposal was allegedly accepted. Unconfirmed.

Specifically named by source were Ecuador, Panama, Venezuela, and Bolivia. Instructions for these labor congresses are said to have been received from Mexico through the Chilean Communist, Pablo Neruda. The general plan envisages a coordinated Communist policy in Latin America against those governments in the hemisphere which the Communists consider have "sold out to United States imperialism."
